Now even small businesses can find all their information fast

Simplexo delivers Simplexo Locate Lite free of charge for Windows and Windows Phone

A free search tool for your desktop and smartphone has been launched by Simplexo, the UK specialist search company. Simplexo Locate Lite solves a frustrating and all-too-common problem – you need to find information you know you've seen somewhere on your desktop or your phone but can't remember what format it is or which folder it's in. Rather than performing ad hoc searches on email, Office documents, social networking sites, etc, Simplexo Locate Lite gathers all the information you need with one single search query.

Federated search—the ability to simultaneously search multiple data sources via a single query—has long been the technology of choice for locating information in disparate data warehouses and large content repositories. In today's connected world, where the data even small businesses create and access continues to expand in both volume and complexity, a similarly robust search solution is now required.

Simplexo has therefore brought the benefit of federated search to the desktop and smartphone, and Simplexo Locate Lite delivers it free of charge. Simplexo Locate Lite consolidates access to local and remote content, saving valuable time and also reducing the frustration of opening individual applications and submitting the same search query in different ways.

Alistair Handyside, Simplexo CEO, is enthusiastic: "We've all been there – you need to find something in your email folders, or was it in a Word document, and you want to cross-reference that information with your contact list, or a website, or social networking site... How many searches do you have to perform before you find what you wanted? How much time did that waste? The beauty of Simplexo is that you search once concurrently across multiple different data sources rather than performing 5 or 12 or 20 individual searches for each one".

Simplexo's unique search methodology returns more relevant search results than current desktop or mobile search tools, and presents a convenient, consolidated display by source and format type. Results don't have to be manually collected, compared, and de-duplicated before you have a full and accurate view of the information you were seeking. Simplexo Locate Lite delivers the information you need, without unwanted results that waste time and valuable resource. And, designed to MoD security levels, Simplexo technology keeps your data totally secure.
